Disqualifying Offences for Drivers of Taxis or Hire Vehicles

Clause 24 of the Point to Point Transport (Taxis and Hire Vehicles) Regulation 2017 (the Regulation) lists disqualifying offences. These offences automatically prohibit a person from driving a taxi or hire vehicle being used to provide a passenger service.

Some offences are so serious that a person will be prohibited from driving a taxi or hire vehicle for life, while others will prohibit a person from driving until the conviction for the offence is spent.

In NSW, a conviction is generally spent after ten years, if the person has not committed any further offences. However, some convictions are so serious they cannot be spent, while other convictions may be spent immediately after they are imposed, or after completion of a good behaviour bond.

A conviction (for the purposes of a disqualifying offence) includes a finding of guilt that may not be recorded by the courts as a conviction.

Disqualifying Offences

What is a disqualifying offence?

Disqualifying offences fall into three categories:

1. Criminal offences – the offence of murder or manslaughter and specific offences under the following NSW Acts:

   b. Crimes Act 1900
   c. Crimes Amendment (Sexual Offences) Act 2003

2. Serious Driving Offences – specific offences (e.g. Drive vehicle under influence of alcohol or drugs) under:

   a. the Road Transport Act 2013
   b. the Road Rules 2014

3. Point to Point Transport Safety Offences – specific offences (e.g. Carry on a taxi-cab service without a licence) under the following NSW Acts:

   a. Point to Point Transport (Taxis and Hire Vehicles) Act 2016
   b. Passenger Transport Act 1990
   c. Passenger Transport Act 2014
You can find the list of disqualifying offences on pointtopoint.nsw.gov.au. This list is offered as a guide only and you should refer to Clause 24 of the Regulation. You may also wish to seek independent legal advice.

What if a person has a disqualifying offence?

Under the Regulation, a person must not drive a taxi or hire vehicle that is being used to provide a passenger service if the person has been found guilty of a disqualifying offence. There is no right of appeal to the Point to Point Transport Commissioner or the NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal in this instance.

Under Clause 24 of the Regulation, taxi service providers (other than affiliated providers) and booking service providers are ‘responsible persons’ for ensuring that a driver with a disqualifying offence does not drive a taxi or hire vehicle.

What if the offence occurred in another Australian state or territory or overseas?

If a person is found guilty of an offence outside NSW, which if it had occurred within NSW would be a disqualifying offence listed in Clause 24 of the Regulation, the person must not drive a taxi or hire vehicle.

What happens when laws are changed?

NSW laws are amended from time to time and this could mean that some of the offences in the disqualifying offences list may be repealed or expire. Under the Regulation, a repealed or expired offence is still considered to be a disqualifying offence.

So if a person has been convicted of an offence that is now repealed, the person will not be able to drive a taxi or hire vehicle unless the conviction becomes spent.

Are there any exceptions?

If a person held an authority to drive a taxi or private hire vehicle under the Passenger Transport Act 1990 immediately before 1 November 2017, and had been found guilty of a disqualifying offence prior to 1 November 2017, they may drive a taxi or hire vehicle, unless the Point to Point Transport Commissioner determines otherwise.

A driver can provide evidence that they held an authority to drive a taxi or private hire vehicle immediately before 1 November 2017 by presenting certified confirmation provided by Roads and Maritime Services (RMS).

To obtain confirmation a driver can complete an ‘Access to Own Personal Records Form’. On the form the driver will need to request ‘confirmation that I was the holder of a driver authority under the Passenger Transport Act 1990 that authorised me to drive a taxi-cab or a private hire vehicle on 31 October 2017’.

This form can be lodged at any Service NSW Service Centre or by following the instructions on the bottom of the form.

Where the Commissioner has determined that a person who held a driver authority immediately before 1 November 2017 should not drive because of a disqualifying offence, the Driver Vehicle Dashboard will display a red indicator under the P2P eligibility status for the person.

“Not all criminal offences lead to conviction and not all offences result in an arrest or go to court. This is because some offences can be dealt with by a penalty notice.”

The payment of a penalty notice (fine) is not a finding of guilt for the purposes of disqualifying offences. Unless the matter was also dealt with by the courts the issuing of a penalty notice on its own would not constitute a disqualifying offence.

How do I determine if a driver has been found guilty of a disqualifying offence?

Service providers should implement, and keep up-to-date, policies and procedures for on-boarding new drivers and managing existing drivers. This includes determining if a new or existing driver has been found guilty of a disqualifying offence.
Determining whether a person has been found guilty of a disqualifying offence involves having a driver obtain a National Police History Check (police check).

Reviewing a police check will assist a service provider to make an informed decision on the eligibility of a person to be the driver of a taxi or hire vehicle.

A police check will outline whether a person has No Disclosable Court Outcomes or Disclosable Court Outcomes.

A police check indicating a person has No Disclosable Court Outcomes means that there is no police information held against the person, or that the person has no police information that can be released according to the category of the police check.

A police check that has Disclosable Court Outcomes, provides police information that can be released including charges and court convictions (e.g. penalties and sentences), findings of guilt with no conviction, court appearances, court orders including good behaviour bonds, pending matters and traffic history.

If Disclosable Court Outcomes are present, they commonly appear on the police check in a table such as this:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Court</th>
<th>Court Date</th>
<th>Offence</th>
<th>Outcome</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Downing Centre</td>
<td>06/11/2016</td>
<td>Drive with high range PCA</td>
<td>Fine $1,000 Disqualification 12 months</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Local Court</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Or this:

| NSW                 | 06/11/2016 | Drive with high range PCA       | Fine $1,000 disqualified 12 months   |
|                     |            | H XXXXXXXXX                      |                                      |

It is important to determine if any of the offences listed are a disqualifying offence under the Regulation. If the person has been found guilty of a disqualifying offence, they must not drive a taxi or hire vehicle.

Note: There are some exceptions; please refer to the ‘Are there any exceptions?’ and ‘What is a spent conviction?’ sections for more information.

When seeking a police check a person is required to disclose the purpose and category of the check which will determine the type and amount of information that is released.

The category will be listed on the certificate, and if the check is for working with children or vulnerable groups, it may contain information on spent convictions. Refer to the ‘What is a spent conviction?’ section for further information.

Spent Convictions

What is a spent conviction?

In NSW, a spent conviction is an older conviction that is deemed no longer relevant for most considerations. This means that if a conviction is spent, it should not be taken into account when determining if a person is prohibited from driving a taxi or hire vehicle under the Regulation.

The effect of a spent conviction is that any information about the spent conviction is generally not required to be disclosed to any other person, and any information about a person’s criminal history is taken to only refer to any convictions of the person which are not spent. There are some exceptions to this, such as applying to work in certain child related roles or applying for a security licence.

Under Part 2 of the Criminal Records Act 1991, all convictions are capable of being spent, with the exception of:

- Convictions for which a prison sentence of more than 6 months has been imposed by the courts
- Convictions for a sexual offence
- Convictions imposed on bodies corporate (companies)
- Any conviction prescribed by the Criminal Records Regulation 2014*

* currently no convictions are prescribed by this Regulation.

When is a conviction spent?

When courts find a person guilty of an offence they make a determination about whether to record a conviction, and the penalty or sentence which should be imposed.

A finding that an offence is proven, or that a person is guilty of an offence, for which a court has not proceeded to a conviction, is spent immediately after the finding is made. However, if an offender was placed on a good behaviour bond, or had other conditions imposed, the offence would be spent on completion of the bond, or satisfaction of the conditions. You may see these in a police check with reference to section 10 of the Crimes (Sentencing Procedure) Act 1999.

In most circumstances, a conviction is spent after 10 years crime free for adult offenders, and three years crime free for child offenders. However, as indicated in the ‘What is a spent conviction?’ section, a more serious offence, or an offence where the sentence resulted in a person being sentenced to a prison term for more than 6 months cannot be spent.

Spent conviction legislation varies between Australian States and Territories, but when considering a conviction or finding of guilt, you should apply NSW spent conviction laws.

This means that when a person’s police check appears with Disclosable Court Outcomes from other states, these need to be checked against the NSW spent conviction laws.

Please refer to Section 11 of the Criminal Records Act 1991 https://www.legislation.nsw.gov.au/#/view/act/1991/8 for additional information on how traffic offences should be dealt with under the Spent Convictions Scheme in NSW.
